>Typical deficiencies may include problems identifying, processing, describing, and working with one's own feelings, often marked by a lack of understanding of the feelings of others; difficulty distinguishing between feelings and the bodily sensations of emotional arousal; confusion of physical sensations often associated with emotions; few dreams or fantasies due to restricted imagination; and concrete, realistic, logical thinking, often to the exclusion of emotional responses to problems. Those who have alexithymia also report very logical and realistic dreams, such as going to the store or eating a meal. Clinical experience suggests it is the structural features of dreams more than the ability to recall them that best characterizes alexithymia.
>Some alexithymic individuals may appear to contradict the above-mentioned characteristics because they can experience chronic dysphoria or manifest outbursts of crying or rage. However, questioning usually reveals that they are quite incapable of describing their feelings or appear confused by questions inquiring about specifics of feelings.
>A common misconception is that affected individuals are totally unable to express emotions verbally and that they may even fail to acknowledge that they experience emotions. Even before coining the term, Sifneos noted patients often mentioned things like anxiety or depression. The distinguishing factor was their inability to elaborate beyond a few limited adjectives such as "happy" or "unhappy" when describing these feelings.The core issue is that people with alexithymia have poorly differentiated emotions limiting their ability to distinguish and describe them to others. This contributes to the sense of emotional detachment from themselves and difficulty connecting with others, making alexithymia negatively associated with life satisfaction even when depression and other confounding factors are controlled for.

Paddock fired a few pot shots at the fuel tanks of the airport with a .308 bolt action rifle because they took away his pilot's license due to his medical condition (a late onset of allergies messed with his eyesight so he couldn't pass the vision test when he tried to renew his private pilot's license). He was planning to get in a firefight with the Vegas PD. He fired a lot of rounds at the SWAT team. The SWAT team collectively fired hundreds of rounds into his suite through the left door of the room. It had so many holes in it that most of the door was removed before the pictures were taken that were released to the public. You may notice that there are very few holes inside of the suite itself. You may also notice that you can draw a straight line from the SWAT teams firing position at the stairwell, through the left door, to the hole in the window, to the harvest festival. The SWAT team was using M4s, not MP5s. The M4 happens to cycle 5.56 mm NATO rounds, same as most AR-15s. The ballistic forensics investigator knew right away that the ammunition extracted from the victims was identical to what Vegas PD uses and decided to not trace which firearms that the ammo came from. This was not an accident or negligence, they knew who fired the deadly shots and wanted to avoid a class action lawsuit and could easily blame a dead guy. Paddock did not fire into the crowd, that was collateral damage from a SWAT team mag dumping into the suite of a barricaded suspect.

Blindly isn't the right term. they likely assumed that he had body armor on. they concentrated their fire in one spot that they thought he was firing from. the idea being that the structural integrity of his cover could be penitrated with a large concentration of 5.56mm bullets. the problem was that they aimed too high and overshot where paddock was firing from. this is why there are so many bullets fired at one spot. they likely didnt consider that they were over 30 floors up and that those bullets could miss and go though a window and still do damage.

To be fair, it's not like they did this on purpose. The festival was several blocks away and they were in the middle of an intense firefight. they just needed this to go away and the easiest way to do that was the fact that paddock happened to have a lot of weapons that fired the same caliber bullets and paddock was dead.

He obviously did not do the deed the MSM does on about.
He is just a patsy.

Had a lone gunman with those assets and intent planned the vegas shooting, he would have done it properly like a white man.
Instead of bringing an entire arsenal of odd weapons, he would have had one or two .300 / 7.62 machine guns, or automatic rifle/battle rifle with heavy barrels to alternate between.

Yes machine guns are illegal, but they are still obtainable if you have connections.
They are purpose made for the task, and firing a caliber suitable for the task goes without saying.

Firing randomly with 556/223 into a crowd hundreds of yards away makes no sense what so ever.
Bringing near a dozen of carbines to do it makes even less sense.
Doing this deed in the same hotel that had prominent Saudis at the top floor and lots of mysterious circumstances makes even less sense.
The media reporting, dying witnesses, changing narratives and lack of information made public makes this almost 100% certain to be anything but what the narrative says.

These weapons were obviously part of something else, likely a planned raid on the Saudis, which explain all the weird operations taking place that night.

Look at the angles. the officers are likely between 5'7" and 6'0"-ish firing their weapons from the shoulder while standing so the muzzle is likely somewhere between 5' and maybe 4'6" from the ground aiming at paddocks likely position. the hole in the window is a little over three feet from the ground (to be fair, it is a pretty big hole). the muzzles are pointed downward. they are over 30 stories up. over the course of a few hundred feet out of the window on an already downward trajectory, the beaten zone being roughly 6 degrees from the window makes sense.

even by BS tinfoil standards that's a huge stretch. Being if swat mag dumped from shoulder height into a door, the bullets aren't going to all of sudden arc down at the sharp degree needed to plow into a crowd.
It would have also blown out all the windows, not this one single tiny spot where he popped it with a hammer.
Then the other claims people make of an arms deals or failed assassination attempt are stupid given the location.
You don't do an arms deal at a dead end room 30+ stories up some street legal semi-autos and bulk ammo you can just buy at walmart. You would just rental van at a storage locker in middle nowhere and everywhere NV but vegas is no where land.
You also don't whoops on an assassination and decide hey lets hang around even longer on this dead end of a hallway, randomly shooting at nobodies for no reason.

The angles don't even sort of line up on any level. Bullet don't fly and arc down and even a degree or two difference in blind fire would miss the entire concert by a mile.
The room is a huge suite and the windows blown out where just off to the side a bit and it's was only the bottom edge anyways. Then we saw pictures of the room and it wasn't all shot to shit near the broken windows, at all.
The room door was blown to shit by swat looking to breech pop and rush the place, not raw gun fire past the door.
being if I remember right he was already dead before they even breached, from his pistol.
but mostly one just can just look at pictures of the room+hotel+distance+30 floors up and tell nothing about the angles work for a shooter other then right at the window, aiming into a crowd in the distance.
never mind all the time stamps of calls to 911 vs filming of gun fire vs response.

He was mixing ambien with alcohol, which is known to increase violent tendencies in people. I think he was just deeply jaded and hated other people, and the drugs drove him to do something drastic.

That makes sense

What DOESNT make sense is SWAT hitting 800+ people going after a single guy. It's so retarded I'm convinced it's the official story and you're trolling me.
